

Where can you afford to buy a house?

Single-Family Owner-Occupied Housing Affordability, Portland Region, 2014

For those making $34,891 – $55,000 a year, affordable housing is limited, and located far from downtown. Most options are close to major highways.

Those making a minimum of $55,000 have more options, although options in the “heart” of the city are still extremely limited.

High-income families have the most options downtown and close-in.

Calculations based on households spending 30% of their gross income on housing. According to HUD, affordable housing costs households 30% or less of their gross income.

Income calculated using the MFI ($69,400, via HUD).
